BusinessSafe Threat Topic: Hurricane Season

Florida's hurricane season generally begins in June and lasts through November. Tropical depressions, tropical storms, and hurricanes all pose a threat to homes and businesses in Florida as well as the safety and well-being of the state's residents and visitors. These storms can cause a number of hazards including power outages, wind damage, debris, and flooding. These challenges all may lead to temporary business closures, road closures, and other hazards that may seriously impact communities. As many Florida residents along the Gulf Coast work to recover from the effects of Hurricane Sally, we wanted to share additional hurricane related resources. Being aware of the potential challenges these storms present can help you stay prepared. The following section provides resources from a variety of state and federal agencies for preparing for a hurricane.
